Collaborative leadership retreat demonstrates the whole is more than the sum of its parts

The Children's Behavioral Health Collaborative leadership's day-long retreat was held April 17th. The participants included nearly forty steering committee members and leaders from partner organizations, grant projects, and workgroups. The Collaborative's collective impact approach supports many groups and individuals working towards a common goal, and this collaboration means continually learning what other are up to.

The word is out: All children deserve our support

The t-shirts worn by a hundred people at the Children's Mental Health Awareness Day state house event held on May 7th, 2015 said that one in five children or youth has a mental illness. But the message on the back was really the day's focus: All children deserve our support. Just as infants and toddlers need responsive adults who can address their needs, older children and youth need supportive families and communities.
